ARMY OF POLICE ON GUARD IN MAXWELL ST. AGAINST MORE FOOD RIOTS

The Maxwell street market district was turned into a virtual armed camp today. Mounted policemen, plain clothes men, motorcycle police and ordinary cops, hundreds of them it seemed, paraded through the streets with strained eyes. They were looking for the reappearance of the army of housewives who yesterday made the Maxwell market look like a fallen war city.

In the meanwhile, 47 women who were arrested during the day of rioting were to be arraigned before Judge Barasa in the Maxwell street court. Yesterday Barasa fined six women food strikers $1 and costs each.

Among the shops visited yesterday and windows broken and kerosene poured over the meats were: Wm. Shurman, 1252 W. 12th; L. Lindberg, 1005 S. Paulina; L. F. Stein, 1448 W. 12th; M. Meyer, 1214 S. Racine av.; S. Barsche, 1445 W. 14th; David Washburn, 1345 Taylor; Jos. Lewis, 700 Taylor and Harry Abramovitz, 1757 Washburne av., and also shops at 1844 Taylor and 2044 Taylor.

The Northwest Side was also the scene of an outbreak. Twenty-five stores were visited, $1,000 worth of meat ruined, windows broken and women injured. Two policemen were knocked down and injured.

Att'ys Frank Comerford and Sam'l Goldfarb, att'ys for the Jewish butchers, made the appeal to Chief Schuetzler for police. They claim that three women agitators from New York are responsible for the trouble.

While the Mothers' League of Chicago was holding an orderly protest meeting against the high cost of living in the Sabin school, Hirsch and Leavitt sts., the lights were turned off for 15 minutes. Many women had brought their children. A panic resulted. Several were bruised.
